What is your link/attitude to eSport?

- I am an eSport player – and I may even go pro one day
- I follow eSport events regularly – and I may also try to play there myself one day
- I follow eSport events occasionally – but I like to play video games
- I have little knowledge about eSport – I prefer other sorts of entertainment
- I would not call playing video games 'sport' – Long live true sport!

Indicate how close you are to the following attitudes:

I tend to act, then reflect, then move further. If I am inactive my motivation declines.  I prefer to reflect, then act, then reflect again. I need time to reflect, to build up energy.

I trust information that is in the present, tangible and concrete. I try to understand the meaning of data analysing it in details.

I trust information that is more abstract and can be associated with other information. I try to understand the meaning of data looking at its relations to a broader context or pattern.

I prefer to come to decisions by associating with the situation, looking at it 'from the inside'. I try to achieve balance, consensus and to fit with my set of values.

I prefer to decide things from a more detached standpoint, measuring the decision by what is reasonable and logical. I try to be consistent and match a given set of rules.

I prefer to start tasks in good time, well ahead of a deadline. I want to have definite plans and prefer not to be distracted.

I prefer to leave finishing tasks until close to the deadline, and I am energised by a late rush of information and ideas. I am ready to change plans if new information comes along.
